

Stax Hosts Fundraiser for Bronx Lab

This week Stax held a fundraiser in its NY office to raise money to buy laptop computers for the Bronx Lab School, a budget-constrained NYC public high school that boasts a far superior record for graduation and college acceptance than other schools in its district.

As has been the case in past years, friends, colleagues, and corporate and private equity clients turned out to support the cause. The approximately 30 attendees shared food, sampled fine Scotches and other beverages, and even got to be among the first to try a new type of table-tennis-meets-raquetball ping pong table: Stax bought and made available for the event the first production model of the new game called INCLUSION (click the link if you want to see a video of the game in action).

Between this fundraiser and the online campaign, we are closing in on our $30,000 goal for the laptop fundraising. The Bronx Lab online campaign will remain open until July 19.

Click here to see the campaign's Indiegogo campaign.